1. Choose tees that match the group's real distances, not everyone's ego.
2. Agree on gimme distance before the round starts.
3. Check the course dress code in advance.
4. Ask before playing music, and keep it low during shots.
5. Arrive early enough to warm up without rushing.
6. Keep pace of play front of mind, even in a casual round.
7. Repair every divot and ball mark you make.
8. Save swing tips for when someone actually asks.
9. Cheer good shots and let bad ones go quietly.
10. Thank your group and the staff at the end of the round.

Tape this to your golf bag.

A good vibe on the golf course starts before the first tee shot — and it's contagious.
